INTRODUCTION

amp.wordmeaning.org is an open and collaborative dictionary project that, apart from being able to consult meanings of words, also offers its users the possibility of including new words or nuancing the meaning of existing words in it. As is understandable, this project would be impossible to carry out without the esteemed collaboration of the people who follow us around the world. This e-Book, therefore, was born with the intention of paying a small tribute to all our collaborators.

furoya has contributed to the dictionary with 15139 meanings that we have approved and collected in this small book. We hope that the reader is very valuable and if you find it useful or want to be part of the project, do not hesitate to visit our website, we will be delighted to receive you.

This vulgarized version of "miserable", very common in some regions of Spain, has a slightly debatable /s/ interspersed. Because one supposes that it has already been replaced by that /j/, although it may appear when the tongue is arranged to pronounce the next /r/. In any case, this pronunciation is usually transcribed as an example and especially qualifies a "bad person, who is unpleasant".

el

1º_ Singular masculine determinant article [note: can be used as feminine when preceding a noun or adjective beginning with /a/ tonic] . See the , lo . 2º_ It is an acronym with few and very specific uses in Spanish, p. and. "Free Electors", "electroluminescence", "Euler-Lagrange", . . . 3rd_? This last meaning is more a comment on the sidelines. It turns out that in many translated texts - and especially if it was made automatic without supervision - web addresses from Greece appear with the domain 100< . the instead of . Gr. This happens because when a translator does not understand what he finds, he replaces it with its transliteration or replaces letter by letter; and the domain in Greek is . 949; 955; . . . which in Latin alphabet are equivalent to /e/ and /l/ . But it's for 917; 955; 955; 951; 957; 953; 954; 942; 916; 951; 956; 959; 954; 961; 945; 964; 943; 945; (Ellinikí Dimokratía "Greek Republic") .

At some point the abuse of this seasoning to simulate that the dish was more gourmet and of higher category gave rise to the verb as excess ornament, which was then applied to the clothing, to the makeup, to the design, emperifollar.

Decorate in excess, comes from chervil, a plant whose leaves are used to flavor and garnish meals. At some point abuse of this condiment to simulate that the dish was more gourmet and more category gave rise to the verb as excess of ornament, which was then applied to clothing, to makeup, to the design,

empernar

1· Fasten with bolts. 2· Sexual intercourse; This meaning does not have a certain origin, it is assumed that it can come from " put the PIN " but in Spanish there is the " pernada " as the movement of the legs during sex, that by metonymy also appoints the intercourse.

empleo público

It is usually used for work where the employer is the State. And it is understood by definitions of employment and public.

empomar

In Lunfardo is to fornicate the male to someone, by extension is to fuck, to harm. It can be a festive reduction of bolting with the influence of knob, by "sticking the knob" (the penis), or perhaps it is taken from the Catalan where it means "seize, cling".

emporcado

Past participle of the verb emporcar. Adjective for something that is dirty, it was pork.

emporrado

1o_ In lunfardo rioplatense is an adjective for "being smoked with porro" (and elsewhere, also). 2o_ Participle of the verb pronominal emporrar .

emporrar

1st_ Poisoning with joint . It's a pronominal verb. 2nd_ Meter , enter . From Portuguese to "push") . See also empomar, recessed.

emportado

See imported, embedded, emporrado, emporcado. . .

emprender la iniciativa

See entrepreneurship, initiative.

Emprestar is a synonym for pay, but only for money and between institutions, banks or Government agencies; But it is also very old and hardly used. The word that is most common is borrowing. It comes from the latin prestitus "given, granted" with your prosthesis en_, converted into em_ by the start in 'p'.

empunga

Error by verbs/empulga , verbs/contest , verbs/ empunta , . . .

empuñadura

Part of an object (a weapon, a tool) that is designed to be held with one hand, especially if it is encircling it as in a fist. See wield , prefix en- , suffix -ura . 2º_ Formula for heading or beginning a piece of writing (such as a story, a letter).

en

1º_ Preposition that unites the action with a mode, time, place, occupation. 2º_ In Spanish it is used as an acronym for "Entidad Nacional", "Ejercito Nacional", "Estación Náutica", "Estrella de Neutrones", internationally 'En' or 'EN' is used to indicate the English language, by English.

en antenas

Another phrase out of context to see if we guess. Let's see, yes, it's the place where the birds nest!

en base o con base

If it pretends to be a query about what the correct shape is, it is not only out of place in a dictionary but is a trick question : it lacks words. Colloquially they ended up using both, in most cases the least bad is the second (the first would originate from an Italianism); but in a forum with prepared people this could generate an interesting debate. Not here.

en blanco

1st_ It is said by the sheet of paper that it is not written . 2o_ By the above meaning, "being without ideas, without memory", also "being without data", "being in a position to receive information". 3o_ Opposition to the term "black" ("illegally or irregularly") says of what is in accordance with the established rules.

en bolas

It is another version for in balls, with the same meaning.

en cualquier lugar

See any , place .

en detrimento

See detriment .

en diagonal

See diagonal.

en estado de intemperancia

I'm sure this comes from some other query, most likely from a misplaced synonym or antonym; But I don't remember where I read it. So I only recommend seeing in (preposition), state ("mode, situation"), of (preposition), intemperance ("lack of temperance"), which are perfectly understood.

en esteroides

Frankly it does not seem to me that it becomes a locution, it is understood with the figurative sense of steroid.

en forma persistente

It is not a locution, it is understood by in (preposition), form ("way, mode"), persistent ("that persists, that is maintained").

en gran cantidad

It's not a locution, and it ended up here because it's like it could be a synonym for the sneer 'to 100<mansarba'. See large, quantity, crowd.

en la inopia

It is a locution, where inopia is not literally interpreted as "economic poverty" but intellectual, of news or knowledge. It is a case similar to balls or balls, which is used as "naked, without clothes" but can also be understood as "no arguments, no knowledge on a subject".

en las puertas

It's synonymous in ad portas, although it's actually a translation.

en las violetas del mar

The query was already made more broadly in "and the afternoon faints in the violets of the sea", although I do not know if it was answered 128527; . See violet, sea.

en maya

It is an error or fragment out of context. See in (preposition) , Maya ("pre-Columbian people and their language") , mesh ("swimsuit") , May ("fifth month of the year ") , gill ("fishing with vertical nets") , . . .

en pedo

Drunk, drunk, intoxicated. It comes from a misinterpretation in the empt. See fart, fart, or fart, fart.

en pelotas

'In balls' or 'in balls' is a vulgar way to say "naked", "no clothes", "with the balls in sight". Despite being a phrase of male use, today it has become popular and also used by women, since the version walking in is more for the toples. Broadly, it is "to be helpless, without arguments, without knowing what to do".

en todos los lados

Another unfortunate synonymous attempt converted to query from 'everywhere' and cloned to 'everywhere' (and the worst thing is that there are more, but duplicate). See everything, side.

en un abrir y cerrar de ojos

Quickly, quickly, "in the blink of an eye."

en un tris

He was about to refer the query to the entries in (preposition) , a (article) , tris ("something slight, very short span, little noticeable fact") ; but it turns out that for the RAE the correct definition is that provided by CARLOS V.

CICOTTINO, which makes it a locution, since it would have a meaning of its own. And I do not know the origin, but it would be good to understand how it went from inane to pernicious; unless the phrase is incomplete and is actually "in a tris of [some risky situation]". See synonym/tris, tris after .

enaguas de suripanta

See: petticoat. See: suripanta.

enaltecedla

Pronominal form for the second (such as 'you') plural person of the imperative for the verb enaltecer . See verbs/enalteced .

encanutar

Hide some good to not share it. (See synonym).

encaramelado

It is a variant of caramelado ("bathed or covered with caramel"), perhaps associated with "smeared in caramel".

encargados

Plural manager .

encariñarse

Pronominal form of the verb incariñar .

encarmenados

Sure is an adjective (or a participle?) in the plural, so it should not be defined here, but refer to its singular masculine. The problem is . . . which one? . It is clearly a popular deformation for another word, which is surely used locally. It can come from escarmenado, hair, wool that detangles, that takes away the carmenado, which is a regression of carding and would also create versions like this 'encarmenado' to "curl, beat the hair"; but it doesn't officially exist in Spanish, nor do I really know if it's used colloquially somewhere. Taking into account deformations, trolling and possible OCR errors, you can also see chastened, caramelized, weeded, perched, sloping, heading, incarnate, . . .

encarnado

1º_ As an adjective it is said of the spiritual or symbolic that takes living body, usually human, and is used in a metaphorical sense to qualify a person as a living example of some virtue or moral defect; for believers in metempsychosis it is the soul that returns to this world in a new body. Reincarnated. 2º_ It is said of the color red, of the color of the flesh. 3º_ Participle of the verb incarnate .

encefalopatía neonatal bilirrubínica

In very rare cases a rare baby of a few weeks suffering from jaundice may develop a 'bilirubinic neonatal encephalopathy', when bilirubin leaves the blood and builds up in the brain causing neurological damage.

encender las alarmas

I knew this expression in singular, but it seems to me that so in plural it has greater expressive force, and is already used in several places. It is to have an attitude or do something that draws attention to intent, about a situation that should be discreet, though not necessarily for illegal or immoral.

Put cool ("cute, arranged") , even if it is not with the best finery or good taste. [Note: the pronominal version enchularse has a different meaning from another meaning of "pimp".

encino aguacatillo

encular

See also encularse.

encularse

Put " 34 ass face; , which would be a metonymy for " be angry, irritated ".

encurdelar

In lunfardo means "drunk" , "put in Kurdish"; it's a thoughtful, transitive verb, so it always uses a pronoun.

encurdelo

First (as 'yo') singular of the present indicative mode for the verb lunfardo encurdelar . View verbs/pickle .

end

It can be an acronym for several phrases in Spanish, as an example I can think of "non-destructive testing".

endemia

It is circumscribed to a place or people, especially diseases said situation. The word seems originated in epidemic that is earlier in Spanish and French, and appears in latin texts, although its etymology is Greek: 949; 957; 948; 951; 956; 943; 945; (949; 957; in in, inside 948; 951; 956; 959; 9> (demos people, population). Although its scope was broader and appointed to the inhabitants of a place or with permanent residency, doctors took it as a reduced form of 949; 957; 948; 949; 956; 959; 957; 957; 959; 963; 951; 956; 945; (endemon nosema disease endemic) and thus came to our days. eneas

1- Greek mythical hero who participates in the founding of Rome. His adventures are told in the Aeneid of Virgil, among other works. 2- Plural of enea. See Reed.

I agree with Jorge Luis Tovar Díaz, it must be badly written, but it should not ask for inequality, I think that what is missing is a space. "In fairness" is the name that is used in some legal jurisdictions for the quick resolution of conflicts, usually with a mediator between parties officiating not judge and only about positions trying to have a reconciliation.

energético

Containing and/or providing energy, in the chemical sense of food or physical working capacity. By extension it is also said of emotional energy. See -ico .

energia hidroelectrica

See energy, hydroelectricity, hydropower.

energizar

Put energy, in a literal sense like when we power an electrical circuit or, figuratively as when we give encouragement to do a task.

energía

It is the ability to perform a job. The term is extended to the food needed to perform the work, including food that produces chemical energy to an organism, or electricity that directly moves a machine. Also figuratively is the vitality and willpower for a task. It is a word that comes to us from late Latin, but its etymology is Greek as 949; 957; (in "inside") 949; 961; 947; 959; 957; (ergon "work") .

epistémico

Concerning episteme ("rational knowledge").

epistocracia

Neologism for what was historically called "qualified vote", in which i could only choose the most capable, the most cultured, the male, the adult, This version goes so far as to propose methods to assume by statistics who someone would vote for even if I wasn't ready to do it. I do not stop to tear down theorists who prefer to limit the vote rather than educate the voter, but I will deal with the etymology. First confuse the suffix _cracia with voters, when it comes to rulers ('democracy' is a special case); and perhaps it must have been 'epistemocracy' ('the government of knowledge, of the wisest'), since 'epistocracy' can be mistaken for "the government of the relatives or close friends" of the Greek 949; 9< 953; 963; 964; 953; 959; 9> , variant of 949; 966; 949; 963; 964; 953; 959; 9> (epistios, variant of efestios "the family, those who live in the home") but as it refers to the vows and not the government, not even with that.
